- * They'll get a free Wolfdog gift every 12 months (T-shirt, Collars, Vests, Leashes etc)

Canine Behaviorist: Tony Nila

Hello Wolfpack!!

Tony and Alexa here! We wanted to thank you all for attending our live feed last night. You all had some great questions.

Before I continue, I would like to share a video with you. That discusses the timing that is needed when working with puppies, and also an exercise called the "No Game" the point of this technique..

1. To Create a calmer mind around a distraction (food)
2. Start learning to read the environment instead of reacting to it.
3. Start incorporating what is called a "marker"
4. Ditch your food bowls and start hand feeding for a stronger bond and less food obsession/aggression. We also encourage offering as much food as they want with several small meals throughout the day.

Please practice what you see in this video and film yourself, we will be reviewing the video during our next live feed. Uploading to YouTube is the best.

Also please remember that everyone has a chance to have a one hour dietary consult with Alexa.

Don't forget the 6 key points I mentioned during our live feed, if you need a more detailed explanation, let me know..

- 1) Remove the toys, give a dog a bone, NEVER toss toys. That's training.
- 2) remove all baby gates and teach invisible household boundaries.
- 3) Keep crate doors open when home, teach puppies to stay inside with the door open.
- 4) Puppy always naked in the house (no leash, collar or harness)
- 5) No short leash walks, always get the puppy in an open space with a training line.
- 6) Play hide and seek.
- 7) While you can, race the puppy and win. In other words, run away from the puppy! Dogs are always running away from us, turn the tables. Dogs perceive speed as power, SPEED is a true hallmark of leadership. When a dog knows that you are slower it is very hard to establish true leadership. Packs don't put slow animals in charge. We can create the illusion of speed by racing very young puppies. They never forget how fast we can be, (they don't seem to get that they were just slow at the time). Sadly, we teach dogs that we are slow in so many ways, and in doing so, dogs come to see us as uppity betas that have way more power than we deserve.
